This Society, as its name implies, is composed of engineers now resident in France who are graduates of Russian schools. Most of the 150-200 members are French citizens, many of whom have lived in France for 30 years or more, though more recent arrivals are also welcome. The purposes of the Society are more cultural than technical, and much of its activity takes the form of mutual help or job finding for its members. Some 30 members attended my lecture and impressed me as very decent people who show no Communist sympathies, at least not openly. The Society maintains a headquarters at 29 St. Didier, Paris 16. Its president is Mr Peter Finissoff.
